LOCAL&STATE

FIRST IN SCIENCE

Treeline Elementary School in Lehigh holds first invention convention. See page

ATURDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 2007 | THE NEWS-PRESS | news-press.com

Lee Memorial cover-up suit delayed

amily to appeal '01 ruling that axed fraud claim

Y PAT GILLESPIE

jillespie@news-press.com

Three days before Lee Memoal Hospital would have had to efend claims its employees lministered a lethal dose of edicine to a hip surgery patient id covered it up, the case was elayed so the family of the dead oman can appeal a ruling.

The nearly 10-year-old lawsuit as supposed to start Monday in ollier County after attorneys Judge Jack Schoonover agreed to change the venue. But during a hearing Friday, Schoonover denied the plaintiff's efforts to overrule a 2001 ruling by a different judge and threw out the fraud claim against the hospital.

"I do not believe it is in my client's best interests to spend three weeks on a show trial that would make a mockery of the system," Fort Myers attorney William DeForest Thompson Ir. told the judge. "It is heartbreakid Lee County Senior Circuit ing that after 10 years and on the footsteps of trial, doors have been closed on her."

THOMAS Patient died in 1997

In March 1997, 81-yearold Mildred Thomas had hip replacement surgery. Because of a rapid heartbeat, an anesthesiologist and nurse gave her a fatal undiluted 875-milligram injection of Esmolol heart medicine. The medicine was supposed to be diluted.

It wasn't until five days after Thomas died that the medical examiner's office found out how it happened. By then, Thomas' body had been embalmed destroying any evidence of an overdose — and was in Alabama where her family was trying to bury her, according to court records.

Thomas' children are now suing Lee Memorial, claiming everyone from the hospital's former medical director to recovery room nurses conspired to conceal the overdose and the mistakes that led up to the fatal injection.

But Friday, Schoonover ruled that based on case law, Lucy Thomas and her family shouldn't be allowed to receive damages. Thompson argued that the case law doesn't apply to this type of lawsuit and without the ability to earn damages, the trial would be pointless, Thompson said.

Schoonover granted the attorneys' requests to continue the case so Thompson can pursue an appeal arguing Thomas' civil rights were violated by the state court. If granted, Thompson said, it could open up the ho tal to be liable for damages more than $250,000, the st law allowed amount for pu hospitals.

Douglas Lumpkin, who representing Lee Memorial H pital and several employees, s earlier this week that the hos tal admits to a mistake but no withholding information.

"From the beginning. Memorial has taken responsi ity for the error that occurre he said. "It continues to de that Lee Memorial and employees tried to cover it up